

Brad Dalhover

Brad Dalhover is the Vice President of Business Development at CROSStrax, a case management software provider for the investigative industry. After graduating from Florida State University with a degree in Criminology and Psychology, Brad worked for two large investigative agencies before starting his own investigative agency in Atlanta in 2002. While implementing technology for the investigative agency, there was a clear need for affordable case management software within the investigative industry. Over the past 6 years, the software company grew to become an industry staple in the case management arena and was acquired by CROSStrax in 2018. Brad has presented the case management topic at numerous conferences across the country.
